BRITISH WOMAN HURT AS SHELLS STRIKE SHANGHAI

Several Chinese Civilians Injured Seriously As Fighting Is Resumed

WOOSUNG IS RAZED

New Headquarters Established By Japanese at Woosung Railroad Station

By Dixon Hoste
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
SHANGHAI, Feb. 9.—(4.20 P. M.)—(INS)—More shells burst within the lines of the International Settlement today as Chinese and Japanese forces resumed fighting on both the Chapei and Kiangwan fronts.

Several Chinese civilians were injured seriously and a British woman, Mrs. Harry Robertson, wife of a detective superintendent of the municipal police force, was slightly hurt, as 16 shells from Chinese artillery pieces fell into the settlement.

The shells were fired at a Japanese plane which flew above.

Neither side appeared to be gaining much either at Chapei or Kiangwan, the Chinese still holding on steadfastly to their positions.

The Japanese, however, scored at Woosung Village, which was deserted by Chinese who apparently had been driven out by a heavy bombardment. The village was razed almost completely.

The Japanese forces crossed Woosung Creek and established new headquarters in the yard of the railroad station. From there they carried on a drive of fighting toward the north, where Chinese still were barricaded at several points despite the heavy naval and land bombardment of the past several days.

It appeared today the Japanese successes at Woosung Village was culminated by the moving of heavy field guns to the location from Shanghai. The guns were carried both by motor truck and destroyer.

Today's hostilities began at 5.00 a. m., when a Japanese artilleryman, at a previously arranged signal, fired two salvos of gunfire on the Chapei sector.

Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, declared the fighting would be carried on until the Chinese forces were driven at least 20 miles from Shanghai. The announcement followed the protest of Vice-Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, commander of the British Naval Forces, asking that hostilities end immediately.

The Chinese were understood to be ready to accept the proposal.

Japanese soldiers were landed in the International Settlement and rushed to relieve the bluejackets in the Chapei area as part of the day's offensive against the Chinese there.

What was practically the heaviest rifle and machine-gunning, which had occurred since the outbreak of the Chapei fighting, was carried on thru the early morning darkness, while howitzers and field pieces of both sides potted away at each other.

During one of the Chinese spurts of bombardment in the darkness several forwarding inspectors were isolated within the Dixwell road police station for several hours.

They were unable to go out and they were cut off from telephoning their families and friends. Within an hour during this "imprisonment" over 50 Chinese shells landed within from 80 to 100 yards of the station house. One shell shattered a section of the wall of the building.

American Doughboys of the 31st Infantry, men of the Second Battalion had a strong sample of the job that is ahead of them as they took over defense of the Settlement boundary early in the night.

Persistent firing and a raw, drizzling rain which penetrated within their very blood helped to make the night uneasy.

Besides lacking sufficient warm clothing, the infantrymen had to borrow helmets from the American Marines, having too few of their own.

Brigadier General George Fleming, commander of the Shanghai Defense Force, warned Chinese soldiers he would "shoot them down" in the event they entered the International Settlement.

WAR ZONE BULLETINS

TOSS BOMBS AT FRENCH

Shanghai, Feb. 9.—Chinese snipers embarked on new tactics tonight by tossing three bombs into the French Concession of the International Settlement just as Japanese bombing planes flew overhead. The Chinese have been suspected of attempting to put the blame for violence in the settlement upon the Japanese. The three bombs however, were amateurish in construction and did little damage. No injured were reported.

With the exception of this incident, the situation along the international boundaries had been quiet for several hours up to eight o'clock tonight.

Both the Chinese and Japanese took this almost complete lull in hostilities to consolidate their position in the preparation for major action shortly in the direction of Trentungon Station and Kiangwan. There was considerable tenseness among Chinese and Japanese lines, but little shooting, both sides apparently being exhausted by the long and bitter engagement of last night when the Chinese launched a spectacular attempt to break through and cut the Woosung motor route.

JAPANESE KILLED

Tokyo, Feb. 9.—Junnosaki Inouye, former Japanese Minister of Finance was shot and killed by an assassin today because of his opposition to Japanese military activities in China. The assassin shot Inouye three times. The distinguished Japanese statesman and financier died shortly afterward.

BELIEVE RING ATTRACTED LUTZ GIRL TO HER DEATH

Police Search for Colored Man Seen Talking to Child Previous to Disappearance

FIND MAN'S FOOTPRINTS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—(INS)—A shining bauble—a golden ring with the initials "D. L. V."—to attract childish attention, was believed today to have led little Dorothy Lutz to her death at the hands of a maniac.

And it is upon this gold bauble that police center their hopes of seizing the fiend who attacked and strangled the 8-year old girl to death a few doors from her home. Her body was discovered, gagged, beaten and attacked yesterday in a vacant house after a search lasting from late last Wednesday when she disappeared.

Footprints discovered near the body and the stranger's fingerprints marring the dead girl's throat also may furnish identifying clues once the maniac is arrested, police hope.

Upon the initials of the ring, however, police for the most part depend to find the slayer. Without a doubt, officials believe, the little girl was attracted into the dank interior of the desolated three-story shack where she was found, by promise of the ring from her attacker and slayer.

A search has been started for a giant Negro seen talking with the little girl a few doors from where her body was found a short time before she was reported missing. The brutality of the crime has convinced police that it was the work of a maniac, possibly a Negro. The house wherein the mangled form was found also had formerly been occupied by a colored family. Other colored people live in the vicinity.

Reconstruction of the crime revealed that the little girl had been attacked and slain in another untenanted building near the structure at 1021 N. American street, where her body was found then dragged through a trapdoor and over the rooftops and dumped into the room where her body was found. The trail from the scene of the attack over the rooftops to the spot where the body was found was marked plainly.

LeRoy H. Roberts, South Langhorne, Dies; Aged 26

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Feb. 9.—LeRoy Howard Roberts, aged 26, of this borough, died at the Home for Consumptives, Chestnut Hill, last evening at six o'clock.

Survivors of the young man are his mother, and one brother, Levi Roberts, of Reading.

The deceased, who was born in Hulmeville, served in the U. S. Navy for four years. He had been ill one year, and had been removed to the Chestnut Hill institution two weeks ago.

DR. C. DUNCAN SPAETH TO ADDRESS GRADUATES

Thirty-Four Young Folks Will Receive Diplomas Here This Evening

WILL AWARD PRIZES

This evening marks the commencement exercises of the last mid-year class at Bristol High School. At this time 34 young men and young women will receive diplomas for having successfully completed the four-year course of study. This group comprises the 48th class.

Dr. C. Duncan Spaeth, of Princeton University, is the speaker, and a forceful address is anticipated from this man of note.

Prizes will be awarded to students of the high school for activities during the past year and during the years in high school. The donors are the Mothers' and Fathers' Associations. The Grundy medal will be presented to the valedictorian, Miss Marie A. Buchler. Books will likewise be given to the graduates.

The commencement program includes: Procession, high school; invocation, Rev. George F. Hess, pastor, Bristol M. E. Church; selection, school orchestra; salutatory, Leon Schiffer; chorus, "Your Song from Paradise," (Brookton-Brown) senior high school; essay, Isabelle Mills, third honor student; reading of Mothers' Association prize essay by the winner, David Spector; valedictory, Marie A. Buchler; selection, orchestra; presentation of prizes and diplomas; address, Dr. Spaeth; chorus, "On the Road to Mandalay" (Speaks) high school.

String Orchestra, Harmonica Solos Feature Discovery Night

At the Grand Theatre tomorrow evening will be the second "discovery" night of a series of five to award the final winner a professional engagement.

Tomorrow night in competition will be an act that should be of interest to many people in this vicinity. It is Miss Margaret Schorsch's radio broadcasting string orchestra, composed of 14 youngsters of Bristol and vicinity. This clever troupe of musicians deserves great credit for its advancement. They have played over the radio on several occasions, but this will be the first time that their many friends here have had a chance to see them in action.

There will also be another local favorite in the person of John Dougherty, a very popular winner of the harmonica contests for five years during Boys' Week. John will be heard in some of the latest song hits.

Another clever performer will be "Babe" Hibbs, of Cornwells Heights. She recently won first prize at one of the Philadelphia theatres in tap dancing and acrobatics.

There will be three other acts and the regular program of pictures consisting of Mickey McGuire's "Side Line," a very funny comedy; a review of events; and Tallulah Bankhead in the feature picture, "The Cheat."

The contestants in the "discovery" night will appear at 8.45 o'clock.

Ruth Judd Cringes As She Realizes the Verdict

By Arthur L. Marek
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 9.—(INS)—Ruth Judd, "velvet tigress" yawned when an Arizona jury found her guilty of first degree murder and decreed that she be hanged for killing her friend Agnes Anne Lerol and dismembering the body.

Today, however, she was stunned and she cringed as she asked the jail matron:

"Can I beat the verdict through appeal?"

On Feb. 23, Judge Howard Speakman will set the date for the hanging. The jury deliberated two hours and forty minutes and took six ballots before returning the "guilty" verdict and setting punishment at hanging.

When that verdict was returned Mrs. Judd was the calmest woman in the court room. She kept twisting and winding her handkerchief, but her face was emotionless.

She yawned while William Choiser, court clerk, read the paper that spelled death for her and she showed no emotion as she walked from the court room as coolly as when she had come in, a faint smile on her face, to hear the jury return its verdict.

THREE ARE KILLED ON HIGHWAY IN SEVEN HOURS

Man, 81, and His Wife, 73, Meet Death in Auto Crash

ANOTHER WOMAN HURT

Couple En Route to Florida When the Accident Occurred

Three persons, two men and a woman, were killed on the Lincoln Highway yesterday in two accidents which occurred between Parkland and Oxford Valley.

The dead are Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Schlicht, Washington avenue, Glen Ridge, N. J. Mr. Schlicht was 81 and his wife was 76. The injured woman, Mrs. Elsa Kermer, 38, also of Washington avenue, Glen Ridge, is in St. Francis Hospital, Trenton.

The truck driver, Robert Beckett, 32, Tioga street, Trenton, was arrested by Dean, a State Highway patrolman.

Schlicht's automobile, which was loaded with luggage and bundles, was wrecked.

The accident occurred shortly after noon, less than seven hours after another man was killed in a collision on the same section of the Lincoln Highway.

The other man was James L. Burton, 26, 1806 Catharine street, Philadelphia. His companions, Miss Anna Gaddia, 28, and Miss Clara Hill, 19, both of New York City, were treated for bruises at the Mercer Hospital, Trenton. All are colored.

Their car sideswiped a truck driven by Albert Booker, 1936 Huston street, Philadelphia, and overturned three times.

R. L. Ammons, 35, Carney's Point, N. J., died in Salem Hospital from injuries suffered in an accident on the Harding Highway, near Salem.

"BRISTOL NIGHT" WILL BE A BIG FEATURE

All Local Talent to Appear at Fathers' Association Meeting

MALE GLEE CLUB, TOO

The meeting of the Fathers' Association to be held in the high school auditorium on Thursday evening, has been designated "Bristol Night."

This is to indicate that the entertainment will be furnished entirely by local talent. The special feature will be the Bristol Glee Club, under the direction of Thomas Snelson, which will sing several selections.

The Fathers' Association Orchestra will also contribute to the evening's enjoyment. Other numbers by local performers will make up a very interesting program.

APPEAL FOR CARS

Transportation is desired for four colored boys to the Boy Scout Court of Honor which is to be held at Doylestown Sunday. Anyone having a car to loan for this purpose is requested to communicate with L. H. Willhite, Cedar street. The boys are members of Troop 4, colored, and are to receive merit awards at the Boy Scout Court.

Trips to Nearby Washington Landmarks

By Edward W. Hocker

Because of the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, keen interest has been aroused in all manner of Washington landmarks. Southeastern Pennsylvania is fortunate in possessing so many of these landmarks, associated with the career of Washington in war and peace. Here with is one of a series of twenty articles describing nearby places which are linked with the story of the Father of his country.

II.—The Keith House

South of Jericho Mountain and about 8 miles north of Newtown, Bucks County, stands an old farmhouse which was General Washington's second headquarters in December, 1776. Here he formulated his plans for the Christmas night attack on the Hessians in Trenton.

He remained at Summerseat, Morrisville, until December 14, 1776, and then moved to the house of William Keith, close to Jericho Mountain. Here he was in proximity to the army, most of the troops being encamped between that place and New Hope and within a short distance of the Delaware River. The army comprised about 10,000 men, but only half were fit for service. However, four regiments arrived from the Northern army, and 1800 militia had assembled at Bristol, under command of General John Cadwallader.

Near the Keith house is the Merrick house, where General Greene had his headquarters and where Washington sometimes consulted with his principal generals regarding his determination to assume the offensive.

The Keith house has been marked with a bronze tablet by the Bucks County Historical Society. It is somewhat difficult of access for motorists, being approached by an unimproved road turning off at Baker's Creek bridge from the main highway along the Delaware through Washington Crossing Park. The road follows Baker's Creek along the southern side of Jericho Mountain. It is hoped eventually to extend Washington Crossing Park so it may include the region about Jericho Mountain, with the houses in which Washington and other generals were quartered.

Washington remained at the Keith house until Christmas Day, 1776. After evening parade that day 2400 troops were marched to McConkey's ferry, now known as Washington Crossing, with the intention of crossing the Delaware River and attacking the Hessian troops of the British army who occupied Trenton.

Croydon Troop 2 Plans For Activities of This Week

CROYDON, Feb. 9.—Croydon Troop No. 2, Boy Scouts, will leave the Scout headquarters here Sunday at 1.15 p. m., for Doylestown, where they will participate in the county court of honor.

The new drill master, Frank Reagan, who is assisting Scoutmaster J. Founds, has planned a trip for the Scouts to Philadelphia navy yard next Saturday. Reagan served with the 108th field artillery, P. N. G.

On Sunday the Scouts of Troop 2 attended a church service in company with Troop 1 and the Sea Scouts.

DID NOT FIND SEA SCOUTING DANGEROUS

Howard F. Gillette, Chicago, Was Appointed National Commodore

NOT DISCOURAGED

This is Boy Scout Anniversary Week and a member of the Sea Scout Ship, "Elks," Bristol, has written the following article for publication: (By a Member of the S. G. S. "Elks") (Continued from yesterday)

Upon those ideas the men of America organized Sea Scouting, and such men as James Wilder, endeavored to put it across to the American Boy Scouts. In 1924, Howard F. Gillette, of Chicago, Ill., was appointed National Commodore of the Sea Scouts. His appointment was due to the loyal support he gave this program.

Men and women from all over the country who had boys in Scouting at first protested against Sea Scouting, saying it was too dangerous for boys, and it did not meet with much success.

But James A. Wilder was not discouraged and through his efforts and tireless work, finally won out. He knew that Sea Scouting would one day become as big as the Boy Scout movement.

In 1926 a National Sea Scout Department was established with Thomas J. Keene, of Chicago, as Sea Scout Director. The efforts of these men were rewarded with a national membership of 2091 Sea Scouts and leaders joining the movement, and the establishing of 123 ships in the cities, towns and villages of the United States.

The ships formed, contrary to what people believed, are not boats or vessels on water, but is the meeting place of the Sea Scouts, the same as a lodge hall, or Boy Scout meeting room. In these ships or meeting rooms the Sea Scouts carry out their programs of Sea Scouting and sea lore. In many cities and towns these ships are many miles from the sea, or water of any kind. For instance, the National Flagship honor for the year 1931, was awarded a ship miles away from a river.

Thomas J. Keene was actually appointed from acting, to National Sea Scout Director in 1927. He was the first director of Sea Scouts in the United States and still holds that office today, his headquarters being in New York City.

The close of the year 1928 showed that Sea Scouting had jumped by leaps and bounds, the rolls showing that there were 5,000 leaders and Sea Scouts and 267 ships. In just two years time Sea Scouting had doubled in membership. The interest in it was growing and people interested in boys' work began to see the many advantages that could be derived from it.

It was in 1928 that the Regional Na-

NEW BRIDGE BIDS

Harrisburg, Feb. 9.—Bids will be received by the State Highway Department, February 26, for a new bridge to cross the Nesheimy Creek at Newtown, Bucks County, it was announced today.

The old bridge collapsed last November 29th, carrying to his death Walter L. Ross, Jr., who was driving over the structure. The new bridge will be a three-ton, reinforced concrete structure with an all-over length of 275 feet.

On February 26, the department will also receive bids for construction of .83 of a mile of concrete road in Bristol and Bristol Township.

With the construction of the new bridge, State Highway Route 326 will be reopened to traffic.

PROBE WOMAN'S DEATH

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—Investigation was under way today into the death of Mary Pugh, 41-year-old Negro patient in the hospital for mental diseases at Byberry. The patient was struck on the head with an iron bar by V. Myers, another Negro patient, according to police. Nurses said Myers wrenched the iron bar from a window.

TO SAIL TO BERMUDA

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—Eddie Allen planned today to sail for Bermuda—peace. The 23-year-old society clubman expects to find peace and contentment under a general mid-winter sun there. No statement was forthcoming from Allen. A curt, succinct spokesman declared, "Eddie has no statement to make." Eddie was acquitted two days ago for the murder of Francis A. Donaldson, 3d.

TELS GANGSTER'S STORY

Burlington, N. J., Feb. 9.—A fourteen-year-old girl tossed from a speeding automobile today, recounted a story of slavery for a metropolitan gangster and how he murdered a man two weeks ago. She is confined to the Burlington County Hospital as a result of her injuries. The girl, May Pepperton, said she lived on Fifth Avenue, New York City.

For the last seven years the girl said she worked in the home of a New York gang chieftain. Last night, she told police, she was horsewhipped because she refused to cash a check which she believed to be a forgery. Detectives said she gave them the name of the slain man and his slayer. They refused to divulge the names, however, until a check-up is made with the New York police.

CLAIM GARAGE PRICE WAS NOT ADEQUATE

David Douglass Opposes Recent Sheriff Sale of Property

CASE HEARD IN COURT

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 9.—Four witnesses testified yesterday in equity court before Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer that in their opinion a fair market value of the Doylestown Garage property on West Court street, is anywhere between $18,000 and $20,000.

The property was purchased on December 11, last year, for $5500 at Sheriff's sale by Charles E. Radcliff, of Doylestown, a member of the firm of Hayman-Radcliff Motor Company, Doylestown.

The property consists of a large garage building and three lots. The actual sale price including the $5500 actually bid at the Sheriff's sale, and other liens, taxes, labor claims and incidentals, was $13,025.

Following the sale, a petition was filed by David J. H. Douglas, to have the Sheriff's sale set aside in an equity case of The Oak Lane Building and Loan Association against David J. H. Douglas. The third hearing in the case was held yesterday and was followed by argument by counsel. John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, represented Douglas, while the opposite side was represented by Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, Henry A. James and Arthur M. Eastburn, of Doylestown.

In the petition of David Douglas, it is set forth that after the execution was issued and the sale advertised, the Oak Lane Building and Loan Association, the second mortgage holder under whose lien the sale was made, through its attorney, Henry A. James, agreed with the petitioner that if he would pay $700, that the sale would not proceed, and that the Oak Lane Building and Loan Association would permit its lien to remain.

The petition further avers that on the morning of the Sheriff's sale, the petitioner called the attorney of the building and loan association on the telephone and informed him that he was ready to pay over the $700, when the attorney in turn, informed Douglas (Continued on Page 4)

169 MORE BIRTHS THAN DEATHS IN 1931, REPORT SHOWS

There Were 292 Births, While the Number of Deaths Was 123

DECREASE IN DISEASE

171 Fewer Cases of Communicable Disease Reported

There were 169 more births reported in Bristol Borough last year than there were deaths reported, the total births being 292 and the total number of deaths 123.

The average birth-rate was a fraction over 24 per thousand of population while the death rate was a fraction more than 10 per thousand of population. The health of the community was also good, there being 171 fewer cases of communicable diseases reported than during 1930. A total of 253 communicable diseases were reported to the health officer during 1931. April had the highest number of communicable diseases, there being 53 reported in that month, 23 of which were scarlet fever.

The annual report of the Health Board was submitted to Borough Council last night at which time it was also shown that the milk inspector prohibited two distributors from selling milk here because of their failure to comply with the provisions of the milk ordinance.

A total of 172 nuisances were reported and investigated and one property was connected with the borough sewer system.

Following is a list of the communicable diseases reported in 1931:

Scarlet fever, 88; chicken pox, 34; pneumonia, 38; mumps, 44; whooping cough, 19; diphtheria, 3; measles, 14; tuberculosis, 11; typhoid fever, 1; infantile paralysis, 1. Total, 253.

Following is a list of diseases causing deaths in 1931:

Chronic myocarditis, 11; acute myocarditis, 1; general encephalitis, 1; rheumatic fever, 1; accidentally drowned, 1; general carcinoma, 1; acute cardiac dilatation, 2; cerebral hemorrhage, 10; mitral regurgitation, 8; senility, 5; influenza, 4; still born, 9; suicide, 4; broncho pneumonia, 5; kobar pneumonia, 9; compound fracture of skull, 1; edema of glottis, 1; pulmonary metastasis, 1; diabetes mellitus, 1; peritonitis suppurative, 1; acute indigestion, 1; acute intestinal obstruction, 1; acute suppurative appendicitis, 1; heat exhaustion, 1; pulmonary hemorrhage, 1; sarcoma of neck, 1; hemorrhage, 2; malnutrition, 1; uremia, 1; scarlet fever, 2; premature birth, 6; carcinoma of uterus, 3; pulmonary tuberculosis, acute, 1; pulmonary tuberculosis, chronic, 4; acute dilatation of heart, 2; angina pectoris, 2; chronic nephritis, 3; asthma, 1; accidental deaths, 4; carcinoma of stomach, 1; acute gastric dilatation, 1; patulous foramen ovale, 1; amputation of right leg, 1; hemiplegia, 1; concussion of brain, 1; gangrene of leg, 1; cancer of liver, 1. Total, 123.

Borough Council meeting in monthly session last night had only routine business to transact and this was done very quickly.

Police committee reported following disposition of those arrested during the month:

Fined, 5; held for court, 1; discharged, 5; committed, 2; turned over to Philadelphia police, 5.

One hundred and eighteen lodgers were given shelter during the month, six doors were found open, four bridge lights, 29 incandescent and two arc lights were reported out during the month.

Burgess Anderson informed Council of the election of James L. McGee, chief; George W. Buckley, first assistant chief; Clifford Hagerman, second assistant chief, of the Consolidated Fire Department. The election was approved.

William J. Lefferts, treasurer, submitted his bond for $50,000 with Joseph R. Grunsky as surety. The same was approved.

Plumbers' bonds for Elmer Pasquale with A. Rago as surety, N. I. Lukens with I. L. Lukens as surety, and Modern Plumbing & Heating Company with Hugh B. Eastburn as surety were presented and approved.

Councilmen present were: Wagner, Williams, Vichner, Warner, Morris, Schmidt, Vandegriff, Barrett, Duffy, Fallon, Jry, Spezzano, Winslow, Pfeifer and Johns.

BANK ACT CHANGES

Through amendments to the Federal Reserve act it is hoped by some to prevent a repetition of the market inflation which ended in the "Black October" of 1929. Sponsors of proposed revisions trace part of the responsibility to defects or loopholes in the act as it stands.

Senator Glass has proposed amendments which he says are based on the lessons of 18 years of experience with emphasis on the teachings of the last two. The clauses covering the curbing of speculative use of credit and authorizing reserve bank aid in the prompt liquidation of closed banks are the outgrowth of events following the hectic October of two years ago.

It must be obvious to all after the bursting of that last securities bubble that the Federal Reserve system should exert some restraint on the extension of speculative credit. Under such restraint the bubble could not have attained the proportions which made the bursting inevitable. There is also a real need for some such liquidation corporation as the Glass measure proposes for the aiding of depositors of closed banks.

Excessive profits made by investment bankers on foreign loans now in default with resultant loss to thousands of American investors are responsible for the writing into these reform measures provisions for establishing more effective supervision over foreign loans. Increasing competition from rapidly spreading chain banking systems assures support from small bankers for the clause for more rigid control of chain banks.

A LOGICAL WORK PLAN

Governmental agencies are concerning themselves with the six-hour working day and the five-day week. At the direction of the Senate the Interstate Commerce Commission will inquire into the merits of the six-hour day while the house civil service commission is investigating the possibilities of a five-day week in the governmental service and business generally.

While the easiest way, when production leaves consumption behind, may be to lay off all surplus labor and give the more fortunate full time work, the more humane way and the best way for all concerned would be to reduce the working hours and days instead of the workers. It is much better for everybody to curtail the tugging power of all than to destroy the buying power of a part.

There is nothing radical or revolutionary about shorter working days and weeks. Were the six-hour day and five-day week to come about now it would only be the next logical step in the orderly evolution of our system of labor. Industrial progress has been steadily reducing the hours of labor.

Look not to the shorter working day and week for a panacea for all the ills of the present economic or industrial system. But they offer the country a new start in the race between labor supply and demand. Were it possible to keep them neck and neck for a year or two, even a cost of thinner pay envelope for all, the country would no longer need a good five-cent cigar. It could afford to smoke 10-cent ones.

SYNOPSIS

The Mexican peons, grown tired of Paco Morales' oppression, await the word from "El Coyote," their masked protector, to overthrow him. Morales has enlisted the aid of the U. S. Cavalry to capture the notorious bandit. Ted Radcliffe, a young American, learns that Morales was responsible for his late father's ruin. Bob Harkness, Ted's friend, urges him not to make an enemy of Morales, as he has other plans. Ted is enamored of Morales' beautiful niece, Adela. At a fiesta, Adela, sensing the hatred of Jito, Morales' ward, for Ted, exacts a promise from Ted never to fight with him. Morales informs Bob that his men will join in the search for "El Coyote" and that Jito has dedicated himself to kill the bandit. Adela tells Ted he must not let his lack of wealth keep him from love. Bob receives a note and leaves the merrymaking. Shortly after, news is received that Jito's vaqueros are raiding the village. Adela goes to the village with Ted and Morales, and lashes a vaquero insulting a girl. She calls "El Coyote's" vengeance upon Jito. The latter abuses a farmer for not leaving his land.

CHAPTER XXII

"For the last time has Paco Morales tolerated such swine as you on the range," the big Mexican went on. "Who is the law here in north Mexico? Morales. Who holds back the gringo on one side and the Yaqui on the other? It is Morales. Why should he allow you to settle here like ticks on a cow, here in the valley, and benefit from what his work has brought about?"

"But, señor, the land was bought," "Now, by every saint in heaven, you come back to that, do you? The land was bought? In this country the government of Sonora himself could not sell you security on the range of Morales. This land is mine. We who follow the cattle own it. It is free, open land for us. It is not land for farmers or for latinos."

From within came the exultant laughter of a man and a woman's scream, quick as muffled fire. Jito, followed by Ted and Adela, the door, followed by Ted and Adela, on a table beyond burned a feeble, smoking lamp, and in the dim circle of light the same vaquero again held the peon girl. His bloodshot eyes glared. His hand moved over the smooth skin of the girl's throat and he grinned drunkenly at Jito.

"Is she not a soft animal, caballero? Por Dios, she will make one the long ride of the night." And he pawed the shrieking girl. Impatiently Jito shook her head. "Let her go."

In surprise the other looked up. He shook his head defiantly. "Let her go." Jito's voice had sunk to a dangerous growl.

"Que val. She is the best of the loot, this little dove."

Jito took one step forward. His hand closed about the man's neck and he raised him bodily from the ground.

"Once before I have had trouble with you," he said in low, even tones. "The next time my boys will call lots for a dead man's saddle." He shook the choking vaquero, then dropped him contemptuously to the floor.

"No harm will come to you, señorita," Jito told the girl. "It is with your father we have business." He turned again to the old man. "Felipe Dominguez, because you did not see fit to take Morales' warning, this night your house is to be burned, your fields trampled by horsemen, and your cattle shot. And because you have defied my orders, these men will give you thirty lashes each rawhide. Tomorrow when the desert country hears, they will begin to believe that it is not wise to stand out against the will of Paco Morales."

The girl ran to Adela and, falling before her, wound both arms about her knees.

"No, no, señorita. For the love of God, make them spare him. Do not hurt him. Do not burn this house. Let them give us but a little time, señorita, and we will go. He did not mean to defy Paco Morales, but we are poor, señorita, so very poor, and I have been ill."

Impudently Adela turned to her uncle. The old Spaniard gave no sign, but as she looked her uncle's eyes rose, with a sudden catlike gleam, and following his gaze she saw Ted, with clenched fists, advancing toward Jito.

With a quick step she was at Radcliffe's side. "Don't," she laid her hand on his arm. "You will ruin everything."

"I'll run a few of these drunken vaqueros." His voice was thick with repressed anger.

Adela's grip tightened. "Don't you see that it is just what they want? This is not your affair, it is mine. I forbid you to interfere, whatever happens." She stamped her foot in sudden anger. "Why must you, too, make it harder for me? I tell you I do not need your help. Go back. Oh, please go back."

Reluctantly he turned and walked to the car.

Already the vaqueros were muttering at the delay, pressing closer about the little circle, cursing, shouting to Jito, eager for the end.

Jito nodded to his men. Laughing, they seized the old peon and lured his withered, wrinkled back. With rawhide they tied his arms to the doorway.

"A bad day for you, compadre, when you thought El Coyote could protect you," muttered a vaquero. "What is the protection of El Coyote worth now?" And viciously the man tightened the rawhide thongs.

Adela threw herself between the vaqueros and that aged, drooping form in the doorway. Her eyes, narrow with anger, threw back the light of the rising flames. Her words lashed them with their tone of cold contempt. "You talk of justice, you dogs, you covering, lawning dogs, that come to fight against an old man and his daughter? Her fingers tore at the knotted thongs and again a wave of pent-up anger arose from the crowd. Jito looked impatiently about him. "I cannot hold them long," he said in a low tone to Morales. "They must have blood."

Once more Adela's voice rose above the tumult. "Jito, make them wait until tomorrow." But her words were lost among the jeering cries, while the maddened crowd pressed forward. A vaquero stood raging before Jito.

"Since when do we take orders from women, hombre? Send her away while there is time."

The tumult redoubled. The shouts had taken on a new ominous quality. It had become the low, deep roar of a wolf pack ready to close on its prey. Quickly Jito raised Adela and carried her to where Morales stood.

"Even if I would, I cannot hold them now," he said. "In another minute I should be fighting for all our lives."

He raised his head. "Bueno," he called. "Thirty lashes to teach this peon wisdom."

Morales looked quietly on. His mouth set in a half-smile. His restraining arms had closed about the girl, and with a sob Adela closed her eyes.

A stalwart vaquero rolled back his sleeve and picked up a heavy quirt. He stood full in the flaring light of the haystack and raised his clenched hand for the blow.

That blow never fell.

From somewhere out of the darkness burst a flame and the vaquero whirled, clutched his breast, then fell headlong at his master's feet.

A clear voice called from the darkness. "Let no man move."

Clustered about the ranchhouse each vaquero stiffened. One dreaded word passed among them like the voice of death itself.

"El Coyote!"

The flames of the haystack rose higher, tossing great sparks into the blue desert sky. Dimly the vaqueros could distinguish a double rank of silent horsemen surrounding them, ready and ominous. The firelight danced on the steel of their rifles and glittered on the conchas of their chaps. Again came the clear voice.

"I am sending men in to disarm you. If one of you moves, it is death to all of you."

Five masked horsemen approached. Quickly they made a little pile of the weapons of Jito's men. A short, stocky rider seemed to have taken charge. Presently he ordered the vaqueros to stand before the door. Meanwhile other riders gathered the horses.

"So you thought the protection of El Coyote not enough, amigos?" asked the masked leader. "You will have other thoughts before dawn. But now I bring you this message from El Coyote. Listen carefully, as you value life, for the patience of El Coyote is not endless. For twenty years you, Paco Morales, and you, his hirelings, have held dominion over the borderland. You have driven men and their families from land that is theirs. You have done it without fear, for you knew that the peon endured much and did little. We had no leader, and for these reasons the herds of Morales have become fat and multiplied, while the people have lived in poverty and dread. Our women have not been safe, our children have had no future to look forward to, our old age has become filled with fear. And all this because Morales wanted a land that was ours by right. Today few of us now have enough land to make a grave, and still the herds of Morales grow." The masked rider stopped speaking.

The dying flames of the haystack cast spectral shadows across his face and caused the eyes behind the black mask to glisten. Still no man moved. Beside him Ted could hear Adela's quick breathing. Jito stood stiffly before him, not knowing whether to expect capture or quick death, while behind, in an outer circle, the outlaws sat in quiet watchfulness.

Once more the masked man raised his voice. "Vaqueros of Morales, a leader has risen. You call him El Coyote. Many times you have sought to kill him. Mexican cavalry has joined with the Americans to run him down. But he is still free. Tonight he is out there with us. Why do you not go forth to him, Jito, you who have sworn to tear out his heart? See, he is out there—only a little way,"—and the masked man pointed to the darkness behind him. A shiver of fear ran through every man. Even Jito himself darted an uneasy glance toward the shadows. Out there, just beyond the rim of light, the unknown killer was. A trembling vaquero made a fleeting sign of the cross. "Dios mio," he murmured. "Tonight for this we all die."

"Listen now to what El Coyote bids me say. The ranchers of the border will no longer bear the yoke of Morales and his vaqueros. From now on we will strike back, and even if El Coyote himself is taken, still will we strike back. And for every cow of ours you take or kill, we will kill two. For every man you give twenty lashes we will tie up one of your hand and give him forty. We are men with our backs to the wall. We have nothing to lose, for life itself has long since lost the things that gave it value. Days of living profit us nothing, for we have neither peace nor security. But that day is done. From now on we fight for the things that make life good."

The Home Economics Schedule

The first semester is set apart by the Home Economics Class to be used for kitchen duties. The girls learn the care of the kitchen, and also they learn to cook.

The second semester is used to acquire the knowledge of sewing. Mrs. Culver is trying her best to make this term of sewing a very interesting one. The girls will make different articles of apparel.

Art

The art teacher of the Junior and Senior high school is having the pupils draw pictures to celebrate Washington's 200th Anniversary. They draw pictures on pieces of school paper; then they transfer them to big white sheets of drawing paper. Their aim is to have a little cardboard theatre and also, to fasten the best drawings of Washington together and have reels of pictures somewhat like a movie.

The pupils are very interested in their work.

Our Sympathy

The following resolutions were drawn up by the faculty upon the death of Mr. Cary, the secretary of the Board:

Whereas, it has pleased the Almighty to call Russell B. Cary to his long home;

Whereas, we have, thereby, lost a loyal secretary of the School Board;

Resolved, that we, the teachers of Bristol High School, express our deep and sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Resolved, that we express our appreciation of the life of the one called home.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they also be printed in the Rambler.

Seventh Grade

On Tuesday, February 2, 1932, the "Sunshine Girls" held their seventeenth meeting in Room 113.

It was suggested that we have a pennant for our club. For our program we sang a few songs. They were: "A Merry Life," "A Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Yankee Doodle." Frieda Endon read a poem called "Be True." Ethel Keers gave us some current events. The last part of the program was devoted to a debate. The question was: "Resolved, That iron is of more importance than silver." The judges were Gertrude Pye, Anna Ellis, Jeanie Beckvoort, Edith Cochran and Miss Watson. The leader of the meeting was Geraldine Shunk. The judges decided that iron was the most important substance.

8-2 News

The home-room of the 8-1's and 8-2's is progressing rapidly in the line of entertaining the pupils. Each morning that they do not have chapel, three or four girls are appointed to entertain the others by doing something interesting.

On Thursday morning, they were entertained by Dorothy Krames and Eleanor Ridge in a dialogue, and Jessie Bell is telling a story which is continued every morning that they have a home-room meeting.

New officers are to be elected, but for the present, the old officers from the 8-2's are taking charge.

Teams Are Announced

The first and second debate teams have finally been chosen. They are as follows:

First team: 1. Thomas Barrett; 2. John McCarthy; 3. Eleanor Finney; 4. Anna Corn (alternate).

Second team: 1. Mildred Heller; 2. Hadley Springer; 3. Irving Granoff; 4. Olive Whyatt (alternate).

Further plans for the team will be announced later.

SELF INSURANCE AND THE OSTRICH STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

The old story about the ostrich applies to the municipality, state or industry that thinks self-insurance affords real protection. As long as there is no loss, it looks as good as any. But let disaster come—is a business—conducted by insurance organizations that have back of them a wealth of experience and resources to give each policy genuine stability. It not only pays when loss occurs, but provides protective services which have led to steadily decreasing insurance costs over a long period of years. Ask your agent about it.

FIRST SPRING HAT
HINTS 1932 MODES
WILL BE ORIGINAL

Taffeta Hats Will Be Something New for Coming Season

By Alice Langelier

PARIS. — The first spring hat has arrived in Paris, although frost has not been frequent and the first little snow-flake has yet to fall. It hints that millinery modes of 1932 promise to be as original as the eccentric little hats that have created so much sensation in the world of fashion since the beginning of summer.

A navy-blue straw seen at Molyneux comes in bee-hive shape, tilted to one side and with quaint little "sails" of violet ribbon and with a turn-up in the back.

Taffeta hats for spring will also be the new thing, made in cloche shape which in undoubtedly coming back, and trimmed with silk flowers. They very often have a bandeau at the side or back, covered with the flowers.

Predictions for spring bonnets tell us that flowers and velvet bows are due to replace all the little feathers on our hats. Easter bonnets will be revelation of what can be done with a bit of ribbon for it is ribbon flowers that will be foremost. The flat velvet bow set off with a silver buckle is another spring idea.

Among the newest Reboux hats are toques with deep cuffs draped low at the front but left full height at the back. This height at the back will undoubtedly continue to be the slogan for spring. Straw, instead of felt, pan-cakes will be tilted forward with a knot of velvet ribbon or a jaunty flower thrust up into the air in the back.

Velvet turbans are rolled and twisted to set low over one eye in the front. One recently seen at the Ritz was in reddish purple with a great satin ribbon running round the crown to end in a gay little bow behind the left ear of the wearer.

"Pourquoi Pas?"

"Why Not?" is the name of this daintily demure evening gown, worn by Marion Davies, M.-G.-M. star. A modestly fitted-in neckline of not with fringed border edging the sleeves merely accentuates the décolletage pattern of the blouse, which is belted above a skirt to give the effect of a modified bustle. Twin pins appear at the end of the yoke and on the waistline belt.

GAELS MEET DEFEAT; COLUMBANS VICTORS

Last Night's Results
Gael, 24; Shamrocks, 28
Columbans, 43; Celtics, 29

The Gaels met defeat for the first time in seven starts of the second half race last night on the Hibernians' floor when Neal McDermott's Shamrocks upset them, 28-24. The game was an extra period affair.

At the end of the regulation time the count stood at 24-all. During the extra period "Hun" Rodgers, stellar guard of the "Shams," and "Gize" Dougherty each dropped a twin-pointer through the cords, giving the Shamrocks their four-point margin.

Incidentally, Rodgers and Dougherty led the scoring of the winners with seven and eight points, respectively. "Eddie" Roe stood out for the Gaels, playing well defensively and scoring 11 of his team's 24 points.

In the night-cap, the Columbans kept in pace with the second place Celtics by going on a spree and scoring forty-three points to establish the scoring record of the second half. Final tabulations of the fray stood: Columbans, 43; Celtics, 29.

Dave Ennis, with 15 points; Coyle, with 9; and Fallon, with 8, were the shining stars of the Columbans' constellation. Hugh McGinley played well defensively.

"Johnnie" Kervick, diminutive guard of the "Celts," led that team in scoring, spearing the cords for five field goals and three points for a total of thirteen points.

YARDLEY FIRST TEAM WINS; SECONDS LOSE

YARDLEY, Feb. 9.—On Friday night Yardley high school added another victory to their list this season by defeating the squad from Willow Grove high school, 35-19.

The game was hard fought with much fouling on the part of the visitors. Capt. John Smith was high scorer with seven doubles and five singles, which was the exact duplicate of the total counts made by the entire Willow Grove five.

This is Yardley's second season in the basketball world and they have a credit of 7 victories and one defeat, which they met at the hands of the New Jersey School for the Deaf on Tuesday night.

The Yardley five were able to outclass the Bucks County champions by a close game, on January 22nd, on the home court.

In a preliminary game the Yardley High second team met defeat by the Willow Grove basketball five by a 26-23 score.

Giftin netted seven two-pointers and a single for the visitors, while Gafgen presented the defenders with four doubles and two singles, and Rembe four doubles for an eight point credit.

TONIGHT'S GAME

Tonight on the Hibernians' floor the A. O. H. team will meet the Aquinas Club, of Croydon, and the Hibs Reserves will play the Croydon Reserves. Tapoff will take place at eight o'clock.

Claim Garage Price Was Not Adequate

that the Oak Lane Building and Loan Association had changed their mind. Douglas claims that as a result of that action he was taken unaware and was unable to protect his interests at the sale.

Douglas alleged that the sale price was grossly inadequate and as appears by two affidavits of real estate brokers, a fair market value under existing conditions is between $18,000 and $20,000.

Witnesses called by Mr. DuBois included Horace B. High, George Lear, William M. Stevens and Richard C. Tucker, of Doylestown.

No decision was made by the Court yesterday.

In the Court of Common Pleas a report of the master was filed in the divorce proceedings of Nelson Raymond Dollinger, 30, of Warrington, against Elizabeth Dollinger, 22, of Bradford Alley, near Neshaminy, in which a divorce, on the grounds of desertion, was recommended.

Did Not Find Sea

Scouting Dangerous

tional Flagship competition program was started. Competition has always been an incentive to urge boys on to greater heights, and to try to beat their rivals in sports and work of all kinds.

Flagship competition had a great deal to do with the growth of Sea Scouting. It put the Sea Scouts on their mettle, and good clean sportsmanship has always prevailed in all Scout activities.

In 1930, membership in the Sea Scouts had again doubled, the number of leaders and Scouts totaling 11,170 with 275 ships becoming established throughout the United States.

This tends to show that Sea Scouting must have an interesting program to advance so rapidly. Those who are Sea Scouts are steadily increasing their knowledge of Scouting and seamanship that will stand them in good stead in the years to follow.

ASSASSIN

A Drinker of Hashish!

In eleventh-century Persia, a secret order was founded by Hassan ben Sabbah, indulging in the use of the Oriental drug hashish, and, when under its influence, in the practice of secret murder. The murderous drinker of hashish came to be called hashish in the Arabic and from that origin comes our English word assassin!

Discovery of the body so near the home of the girl's widowed mother, Mrs. Florence Lutz, has led also to an investigation of the police squads assigned to search for the missing girl. Safety Director Kern Dodge wants to know why his bluecoats didn't search the house, only seven doors away from the girl's home, the very day she was reported missing. It was not until a city-wide search had been started and four days elapsed during which her slayer had ample time to flee the city that the body was found. Unless ample reasons can be given the angered safety director a shakeup of the district police staff impends.

Several suspects seized immediately after the girl's disappearance was solved were released after questioning.

"CONGRATULATIONS! You must be proud of your son!" Mrs. Burns was completely at a loss. Tom was doing well enough at college—he she had heard of nothing unusual.

"I'm afraid I don't understand, Mrs. Green," she said perplexedly. "What has Tom done now?"

"Hasn't he told you? My boy was full of it last night. Tom's the new class president!"

Mrs. Burns shook her head. "I hadn't heard," she said. "He's the world's worst correspondent!"

"And so is my boy," replied Mrs. Green, "but we keep in touch by telephone—each Sunday night, you know. It only costs a trifle."

Mrs. Burns laughed. "A regular telephone date! That's a splendid idea—I'll call up Tom tonight."

The Grand Old Man of Boston

By HARDIN BURNLEY

Rabbit

MARANVILLE

GRAND OLD MAN OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE, WHO AT THE AGE OF FORTY IS PREPARING FOR HIS 21ST ACTIVE SEASON!

"RABBIT" WAS A BIG HIT ON THE RECENT TOUR IN JAPAN.

SPORT BUG.

© 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great British rights reserved.

OLD Man Time is certainly taking it on the chin from little Rabbit Maranville! The Braves' devil-may-care infielder will pass his fortieth year next Fall and his twenty-first season in the big show.

The National League's head "cut-up" played a pretty fancy brand of baseball last season, and 1932 will see him prancing around the infields of the older circuit's stadiums, giving the fans many a laugh with his antics and famous "pocket ball" catch.

Pep is Maranville's middle name and many a rookie youngster, born about the time Rabbit first started flinging the pill around the National League lots, must envy the irrepressible energy with which the veteran cavorts.

Let us take a peep at the Rabbit's record and marvel at the fact that the old infielder has gone that long at top speed. It is true his 'legs aren't what they were when he started with the Braves in 1912, but they still are good enough to keep him in the big show.

When the curtain came down on the 1931 season Maranville had participated in 2,355 games and had been to bat 8,930 times. In these trips to the plate he garnered 2,350 hits for a long-time average of .263, scored 1,139 runs and copped 285 bases. In the field he excelled at both short stop and second base.

Jack Quinn is the only other big leaguer who has been on the major circuits as long as the Rabbit. Infielders are supposed to wear out faster than the lads who patrol the gardens, but Mr. Maranville thumbs his nose at this law of the game.

Rabbit evidenced his proclivity for being the "life" of every party on the recent Japanese tour of the selected American players. The old boy from Boston certainly stood the Orientals on their heads with his comedy fielding stunts.

The Japanese laughed and cheered him until they were hoarse. Rabbit's love of giving the boy's a "one-man-circus" on and off the field has got him into hot water more than once. In 1925, for example, he was appointed manager of the Cubs. The bosses of the Chicago club thought that his high spirits and baseball brains would bring their outfit right into, or at least very near to, Pennant Land.

Maranville lasted only two months. His high spirits were too much for both him and the ball players. Charged with misconduct, he was deposed, and during that Winter was sold to the Brooklyn Robins for the waiver price.

He proved no bargain there, either, and in the Fall of 1926 Rabbit was released outright. But he bounced back into the big show. Flushing plenty of stuff with the Rochester Internationals, the St. Louis Cards brought him back to the majors and since then he has behaved as well as any veteran with the heart and bubbling spirits of a kid can be expected to.

After helping the Cards to cop the flag in 1929 he was sent back to Boston and ever since has been one of Beantown's prize exhibits along with the Bunker Hill Monument and dear old Ha-Ha-Harvard. Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.
